Joseph M. Lauweryns, M.D., Ph.D.
Experimental Laboratory of Cardiopulmonary
and Genital Pathology
Vesalius Institute
University of Leuven
12, Minderbroedersstraat, 3000
Leuven
Belgium

The Lymphatics of the Lung: Their Role in Fluid Transport and Clearance of Airborne Particulate Matter.

The morphology of the pulmonary lymphatics and their role in pulmonary fluid transport and airborne particulate matter will be investigated, using light optical and electron microscopical methods.

Activation Date: January 1, 1971

Current Grant Level: $37,539.

100575536

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/zfnk0000